2. Background. STAP is a small group of senior scientists and executives from industry and academia who serve you as a source of independent advice on intelligence issues related to science and technology (S&T). Since its formation in 1976, the Panel has routinely met with the DCI during its triannual formal meetings to report on its activities and comment on selected S&T issues of current significance. You have met with the entire Panel on one previous occasion (October 1987); you also met with the group's Chairman, separately in December 1987. Your travel schedule did not permit you to meet with STAP during its January 1988 session.

3. Substantive support for STAP is provided by Dr. Julian Nall, National Intelligence Officer for Science and Technology. He will forward you an agenda and appropriate background material in advance of the meeting. The Panel expects to emphasize two topics at the July session: arms control and superconductivity. Attached to this memorandum is a list of the current STAP members with capsule biographies.
